We're people, not cases! This simple sentence humanizes any definition or reference to individual characteristics. The Specter Disorder of Autism (TEA), is a neurobiological developmental disorder, manifested during the early years and lasting all their lives. Among many other characteristics, some people within the Specter Disorder of Autism may be inflexible on routine, with very rigid interests, very sensitive to sensory stimuli, understand what they are told literally, poor communication or unsocial. Starting from the above mentioned postulates, you want to make it clear that every person is diverse, there are common features, but they do not necessarily have to be all. So you are respectfully invited not to generalize. Some of them may be inflexible to routines, this is because they often attach to structures already established. So when there are changes, they can feel very strongly about it. Therefore, it is of utmost importance to anticipate what you are going to do and if something changes let them know and make sure they understand. This can be supported visually with use printed pictograms or digital applications including Dictapicto is recommended, which can also be downloaded onto your mobile phone. Their interests can be very rigid, or focus only on their interests. As for sensory stimuli, you should anticipate and know very well every person and there is that affects you. For example, exposure light, some textures, meals, sensations, or noises can cause them to enter sensory crises that can be mistaken for chills. Therefore, is very important to anticipate situations and prevent this type of crisis above the stimuli that affect you. Some do not stare, we must be respectful of this and never force them, even if they do not look at important. Is that there are CIA2 that you search with the new lines to break barriers, physical or mental barriers, allow people to develop as people who can contribute to their lives, with Valaa, strengthening their self-esteem, part of the society, and promoting their integration in a comprehensive way. Message Registered according to Rodríguez, K. Aé a AT is not a case, A person. They are not treated, a feature is supported. The "Cure", but the transformation of a situation "(p. 29) is not sought. Transmission of this type of messages of respect, tolerance and acceptance, can achieve great changes, to live better. Where differences are no longer hidden but are part of the diversity human.
